DRIVER WINS BY EIGHTEEN THOUSAND

SIGHT OF MISSION WOMAN ENDANGERED BY AUTO ACCIDENT

Car Wrecks Wagon Near Washington Union High School

Mrs. John Maderos, of Mission San Jose, may lose the sight of one eye as the result of an accident near Centerville on the evening of October 29, when the car in which she was riding struck a wagon, veered away, and crashed into a telephne pole. John King and his son, John, Jr., who were riding in the wagon, were uninjured, as were the other two occupants of the auto who were Evelyn Dutra, of Warm Springs, the driver, and Mrs. Maderos' daughter, Florence.

King and his son, riding without lights on their wagon, were about to pass the Washington Union High school on their way home from Centerville when the auto struck them from the rear. It was just at dusk, a time when objects are almost indestinguishable, and Miss Dutra failed to see the wagon. She swerved, but could not avoid striking it, and her car practically demolished the flimsy vehicle. John King and his son, who live on John Santos road near the highway, escaped, however, without injury other than body bruises and shock.

After hitting the wagon the auto veered off the highway and struck a telephone pole. Miss Dutra and Florence Maderos both suffered only minor cuts and bruises. Mrs. Maderos was so severly cut about the face that seventeen stitches were necessary. Several pieces of glass were removed from the eye and it is still uncertain as to whether she will recover the sight of that organ.

HANSEN LUMBER COMPANY STARTS NEW BUILDINGS

Carload of Lumber Unloaded on Main Street Land

A preliminary survey for a building on the P. C. Hansen property on the west end of Main street was begun Wednesday morning. The building will be the first in the Hansen Lumber Company's program for a distibution yard on this property.

The building will be built of brick and will have a fif y-foot frontage on Main street and will extend one hundred and forty-four feet deep. It is as yet undecided whether it will be one or two stories.

A spur track from the Southern Pacific railroad lines was run on the poperty about a month ago. At that time the ground was smoothed and rolled to prepare it for building puposes, and all obstuctions were cleared away.

A car load of lumber was switched onto the new spur Wednesday morning and the lumber unloaded.

Although the Hansen Lumber Company was reluctant to divulge any difinite information of their plans, the present activities indcate that here is the beginning of a great building development which will add much to the progress of Niles.

NEW CANCELING MACHINE SET UP IN POST OFFICE

A new electric canceling machine was installed Saturday in the Niles post office. Canceling all sizes of letters and post cards at the rate of four hundred per minute, it will be a great help in the Christmas rush.

The letters have to be stacked all the same way; that is, with all the stamps at the same corner of the stack. A handful of letters are then held on edge, stamps down, against an unright metal plate. The bunch of letters is then pushed between a whirling wheel and the plate, and the wheel draws them one at a time across the canceling type.

A man from Washington, D. C., who has been traveling over the United States installing similar machines, directed the setting up of the Niles machine.

ARRAIGNMENT POSTPONED

The arraignment of Joe Serpa, who is accused by J. C. Shinn and John Furtado of attempting to steal ranch equipment from them, was postponed until November 18, at 1:30. The arraignment was to have taken place last Friday, before Judge Silva.

HOBO EPICURE GIVEN NINETY DAYS IN JAIL

The county jail is now catering to the fastidious appetite of one, Charles Wagner, hobo. Last Friday, Mrs. E. H. Hirsch, of Irvington, served him a meal at his solicitous request. The food did not meet with his approval, and his ungentlemanly abuse of it became so irritating to his hostess that she called Constable Manuel J. Bernardo. So, for ninety days, he will have opportunity to pass judgement on the county board.

CHILDREN'S STORY HOUR

The first story hour for this winter was held a week ago last Monday at the Niles Public Library. These story hours, given by Mrs. Roland Bendel, had been discountinued during the summer months. Her program provides for one story every Monday afternoon; but in response to a tremendus demand from the children the story of Pinnochio which was told serially last winter, was started again last Monday. Wooden marionettes, which make a big hit with the children, are used to illustrate the story.

NIGHT WATCHMAN RODERICK O. K., ACCORDING TO LOCAL CHAMBER

A discussion of Niles' nightwatchman, Art Roderick, occupied the entire meeting of the Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday noon of this week. The fact that his insurance policies, protecting all store owners of Niles from any loss due to his actions and doings, will expire within thirty days brought this discussion to a head at this time.

In a report of the past activities of the watchman it was brought out that the present man has been in service one year. At the beginning of the year the chamber of commerce made up a subscription list which if fully paid up each month, would give the watchman a salary of one hundred and thirty-five dollars. The chamber collected salary for wo months in advance and turned the account over to him, with the instructions that in the future he was to do his own collecting. It seems that through poor management on his part, the watchman has not been collecting the full quota each month, and opinion varied as to whether he had been collecting sixty-five or one hundred and nineteen dollars every month.

In general the watchman's services have been very satisfactory. H. B Rathbun, Harvey Braun, and F. V. Jones spoke favorably of his services. W. B. Kirk reported that he has not been approached for his monthly subscription since the first two months. It was also known that several other subscribers could make identical reports.

The pressing business before the meeting was, however, the raising of Roderick's insurance for the protection of his employers. The watchman is suposed to pay for his own insurance, but the deficit in his monthly salary has prevented him from paying but sixty dollars toward it, leaving a balance of thirty dollars and fifty cents.

Because of the lack of definite knowledge as to just what amount Roderick's salary has been, the members decided to hold the matter over until next week and in the meantime find out if Roderick can raise the balance of the insurance premium.

In the minutes was a report of the executive committee meeting held last Tuesday afternoon. In that meeting they disbanded the Special Funds committee and appointed the entire executive committee as a new Special Funds committee. The new committee is to get in touch with the Centerville and Alvarado chambers to discuss a dance or other entertainment whereby money may be raised to fill the Boy Scout quota and the Niles quota toward the Welfare Home .This new committee will have full charge of handling any money which may come into its fund.

LEGIONNAIRES TO SERVE MEAL FOR MEN'S CLUB

At the Christmas jinks of the Washington Township Men's Club on December 10, the local post of the American Legion will put on the dinner, and Louis Ruschin has been chosen chef. The affair will be in the Veterans' Memorial building in Niles.

For the first time in the history of the club, the banquet is to be a strictly stag affair the Legionaires preparing and serving the food. Louis Ruschin is busy rounding up turkeys to be roasted for the banquet, and he and the other Legionaires on the dinner committee will do their utmost to outclass the efforts of the various groups of women which have prepared the food for former celebrations of the club.

CATHOLIC FAIR TO BE HELD IN CONNOR'S HALL

The annual Catholic fair will open tonight in Connor's Hall for three nights, November 6, 7, and 8, and the public may avail themselves of this opportunity to enjoy themselves and at the same time spend their money for a beneficient cause.

The fair will feature two booths this year. One will be a Country Store, where groceries will be given away. The other booth is a fancywork booth. Besides these two booths where the lucky are the favored ones, there will be ice-cream and candy booths where these things may be purchased for refreshment.

The proceeds will be used toward the upkeep of the Corpus Christi church which has recently installed a new roof and curbing.

Spanish War Veteran Starts New Industry Today

A SHOE SHINING parlor is opening today in Niles next to the Chili King on Main street! Thomas Larkin, the proprietor, has fitted it out especially to cater to the ladies. Of course, men are expected to get their shoes blacked (or browned) at the same place; but as the owner of the industry points out, the stand is inside so that the fair sex may be saved the embarrassment of prying eyes of passers-by. He adds that there will be no occasion for loiterers around his place of business to furnish a source of further embarrassment.

A bowl of goldfish and a bouquet of flowers will be the backbone of his charming window display. Inside the shop, the stand itself is decorated in black and orange and has cushioned seats and back rests. Curtains in the window and a curtain dividing the front of the shop from the back storage space, give the place a "homey" atmosphere.

Thomas Larkin is a pensioned Spanish-American war veteran, having spent two years in the Philippine Islands.

LANDLADY ROUTS PROWLER FROM HOTEL HALL

A 4-A. M. prowler in the Wesley Hotel was routed by Mrs. Davis, the proprietress, after she was awakened Tuesday morning by his footsteps in the hall. A thorough check-up later in the day revealed nothing missing.

When Mrs. Davis left her room to investigate the noises which she heard in the hall, she found a hatless, well dressed man sneaking toward the steps leading to the street. She spoke to him and he fled on the run down the stairs. She immediately made a check-up of all the rooms and found the doors all locked. Two lights in the halls had been unscrewed by the prowler.

Art Roderick, nightwatchman of Niles, was called and a thorough search of the vicinity failed to uncover the man.

CHILDREN'S STORY HOUR

The story hour at the Niles Public Library was started for the winter a week ago last Monday by Mrs. Roland Bendel. She tells one story every Monday afternoon. Responding to a tremendous demand of the children, Pinnochio, was started as a serial last Monday. Wooden marionettes, which madd a big hit with the children, are used to illustrate this story.

MISS MARY SILVA, JOSEPH BORGE, MARRIED

Miss Mary Silva, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Silva, of Mission San Jose, became the bride of Joseph Borge at a simply appointed service held Sunday in St. Joseph's church. The Rev. Father Leal officiated at the nupitals.

The bride wore a gown of white silk, the skirt being long and graceful. She wore a veil of white net, and her dainty cap was caught by orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white roses.

Miss Agnes Paecho, the bride's cousin, was matron of honor. Her gown was of heavy pink silk, ankle length. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

William Borge was best man for his brother, the groom.

About one hundred friends and relatives were present to wish the bridal couple best wishes for the future.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Borge are both well-known in this township. They will make their home in Mission San Jose.

Mrs. Sadie Baker, of Berkeley, and Mrs. Harry Hayes, of Colorado, spent the week-end with their sister Mrs. A. A. Hatch.

MURPHY'S STORE ROBBED; THREE CAPTURED

Three youths broke into Murphy's store Tuesday night and robbed it of dry goods, groceries, and six dollars and seventy-five cents in cash. They were discovered before morning in a box car in the Western Pacific yads on the south side of town.

Jack Gusman happened to be passing by the store about nine-thirty and he saw a figure with a pack on its back sneaking from the rear of the store. He immediately notified Art Roderick, nightwatchman, and after an investigation in which T. J. Murphy joined, it was discovered that the youths broke in through the rear of the store and had escaped with corduroy trousers, shirts, boots, shoes, groceries, and small change amunting to six dollars and seventy-five cents.

Tom Silva and Pat Enes were called to conduct a seasch for the burglars. After a considerable hunt they were captured in a box car, in the Western Pacific yards, a little before midnight.

They were Edward L. Bank, 21, known as "Frenchy," of Tacoma, Washington; Clarence Lunden, 20, of Seattle, Washington; and Carl Bordweel, 23, from Missouri. They had recently finished serving a term in Salinas for a similiar burglary, and are now lodged in the county jail while wainting for a hearing.

LIVE CHRISTMAS TREE DEDICATED TO CHILDREN

Winnie Bendel, 10, Gives Tree To American Legion Boys

In order to have a living Christmas tree for the children of war veterans, Winnie Bendel, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Bendel, has donated her live Christmas tree to the American Legion. The tree, a ten-foot Colorado spruce, was originally purchased from the California Nursery by Mr. and Mrs. Bendel for their daughter when she was two months old. It was kept in a pot till it outgrew that and was then transplanted to the yard of the Bendel home. It has now been moved to the Legion building in Niles, there to be used every Christmas for the delight and amusement of children.

The tree was moved Wednesday without charge by the California Nursery and was set in place on the grounds of the Legion building. At noon Thursday a planting ceremony took place, under the direction of E. Dixon Bristow, principal of the Niles grammar school. Led by Winnie Bendel, each youngster of Legion veterans threw in one spade of dirt.

A committee meeting was held Wednesday night to plan for the tree dedication ceremonies on Armistice day. At that time the tree will be dedicated to all the children of veterans in Washington Township. The committee hopes to have the tree lighted up in time for the Men's Club Jinks on December 10.

A week ago J. J. Alberg and B. E. Amyx spent the week-end on the north fork of the Stanislaus river, four and one-half miles above Dorrington. They returned home with an excellent mess of mountain trout.

OLD GIVES WAY TO NEW

SCOTT'S CORNERS, SCENE OF JOAQUIN MURIETA OUTRAGE, IS MODERNIZED

FILLING STATION RISES

Where once stood an old store in which Joaquin Murieta, famed bandit, is said to have shot and killed the storekeeper in the old romantic days following the gold rush, a modern filling station and inn will be constructed, at the intersection of the Sunol, Mission San Jose Pass and Stockton Pass roads just east of Sunol.

The property belongs to Mrs. Py, whose husband purchased it from a man named Scott, according to the records in Mrs. Py's possession. The deed for the property is signed by Abraham Lincoln and is dated in 1867. Scott's Corners, as the spot is known, has been a landmark in this district for many years, its actual history being recorded back as far as 1850.

The old Scott store, which still stands, has lost some of its popularity with the passing of years, but the fact that Murieta was connected with it in one of his deeds of violence, has endeared it to the residents of this community.

The entire hill is being excavated in order to make way for the modern improvements. The filling station will be in keeping with the history of the place, however, Mrs. Py stating that it will be of the old mission type architecture. The roof will be of red and white tile. The building will be arched as will the entrances, one which will face toward Sunol.

The excavation of the hill is nearly complete and work on the station itself is expected to begin within two weeks, Mrs. Py stated. The building will be 12 by 18 feet. It will have four gasoline pumps from which Shell, Richfield, Union and Gilmore products will be dispensed to the public.

It is the plan of Mrs. Py to add an inn in the near future, the building to be erected upon the same site as that of the store in which the scene of the Murieta shooting took place. The inn will be for the use of private parties, it is said.

This new station will be open to the public by the first of the year at the latest, it was stated.

FARM BUREAU NOTES

Slogan Is Proposed

'Every Member Get A Member.' This slogan suggested by President R. C. Kennedy of the Alameda County Farm Bureau, on his re-election, was adopted by the Board of Directors in their annual meeting at Livermore on October 23. Reports show a very favorable year just closed and the outlook and program for the coming year, together with membership matters, were items of the meeting.

Walter Block of Livermore, was elected state director. Other officers including President Kennedy, are A. E. O'Donnell, vice-president; T. W. Cordry, secretary; and E. W. Burr, treasurer. Department representatives include John Busch for Field Crops; H. Boehm, Poultry; Carl Zwissig, Dairying; John McGlinchey, Stockmen; Chas. S. Long, Jr., Horticulture; Mrs. C. F. Bailiff, Farm Home Department.

Reports by Center directors showed that center meetings this year were well attended, with an average of 40 at each meeting. Programs included timely subjects on cultural problems and community projects, as grain cleaner, tree planting, picnics, etc. were carried on successfully. A special item for this year was the social side of the gatherings.

E. G. Rush, representing the Pacific Rabbit Breeders Association, appeared before the meeting and told of the problems of the rabbit industry. Of great benefit to the district, this production line has suffered from ups and downs and is not on sound economic basis. The Farm Bureau directors pledged to aid the rabbit breeders, if this could be done in an organized way.

Social Meeting

Members of the Bayview-Castro Valley Farm Centers forgot their troubles this month at a social gathering held in the Castro Valley School. A basket lunch under the direction of the Farm Home Departments and a committee of the two centers, with salad, beans and coffee furnished by them put everyone in a good humor.

W. E. Booth was re-elected director of the Castro Valley Center, and Mrs. George Walter, secretary. Bayview Center has new officers in A. Nelson, director, and Ada Huchthausen, secretary.

Present Amendments

Edson Abel, attorney for the law and utility department of the California Farm Burean Federation, presented the measures on the November ballot and arguments for and against them at the center meeting at the Pleasanton City Hall on Friday evening. The Livermore grain cleaner handled 10,000 sacks of grain this year, an increase of 2,000 sacks over last year. Julius Jensen was elected director, H. Christensen, vice-director; and A. E. O'Donnell, secretary. The center committees include E. Wente, H. Hartman, J. E. Regan, W. G. Wagoner and T. Nissen.

Fewer Fires

All you smoke-eaters look to your laurels.

John McGlinchey and his fire laddies reported a successful season, with fewer and smaller fires. This year this rural fire department has answered 56 calls, which burned over 186 acres. Only one grain fire was reported. The burning of the grass along the state highways reduced the number of fires started by passing motorists, but a new hazard, cigarettes dropped from airplanes, accounted for two conflagrations.

Construction of Julian-Kane Springs road now assured and will be known hereafter as joint highway number 17.

Merger of Two Great Banks, Banks of Italy and America, Became Effective Nov. 1st.

Name To Be Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association

The Consolidation Committee named to handle all of the details incident to the merging of the Bank of Italy and the Bank of America of California, last week announced that it had virtually completed its work and that all was in readiness for actually putting the merger into effect at the close of business, Saturday, November 1, the date set by the Comptroller of the Currency. The merged bank opened on the morning of Monday. November 3, under the name of Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association.

The committee is composed of ranking officers of Transamerica Corporation, the holding company of both banks, and of the banks themselves. It is headed by A. P. Giannini, chairman of the advisory committee of the corporation.

The merged bank, with its affiliate, a state chartered institution, which it is also planned to call the Bank of America, will have 436 branches in 239 cities. Combined resources of the two institutions will he approximately one billion, three hundred and fifty million dollars.

The merger plan involved three major issues, the consolidation of the branches of both banks in the territory that they jointly occupy, the incorporation of the affiliate bank to include the branches outside and certain branches within that joint territory, and the reassignment of personnel to care for the work of both the national and the state bank. As a result of the scope and the extent of the merger movement and the existence within Transamerica Corporation of a number of active subsidiaries, the Consolidation Committee has found it possible to accommodate all of the personnel involved. Further than that the fact of the consolidation itself has greatly enlarged many agencies of service within the institution, creating opportunities for the bank workers that did not exist before and widening the field, proportionately. for all types of banking talent. The consolidation is to be accomplished not only without decreasing the personnel but with enlarged opportunities for the employees involved.

The operative details of property appraisals and audits incident to the merger are being attended to by a force sufficiently large to have this work virtually completed by the time that the merger is proclaimed. Field forces from the headquarters of both banks have been active among the branches for some time, putting into effect the provisions of the consolidation plan in order to insure smooth operation when the merger actually was effected.

Arnold J. Mount, president of the Bank of Italy since October 17, 1929 is the president of the Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association. E. J. Nolan, president of the Bank of America, is now chairman of the board. The bank will maintain administrative offices in both San Francisco and Los Angeles, the board of directors holding its monthly meetings alternately in each city.

NEWARK NEEDS NEW HOMES

In spite of the number of new homes built in Newark this last year, the community is still growing so fast that workers in the town are forced to find living quarters elsewhere. There is not a vacant house to be found there. The opening of the new plant of the California Chemical Company a few months ago brought many new employees to Newark and is responsible for present housing conditions. Many are living as far away as Hayward. Several new homes are now under construction and the building campaign is expected to be continued until the town is able to accomodate its workmen.

New Method of Piano In Alvarado School

A number of girls and boys of the third, fourth and fifth grades at the grammar school in Alvarado are now taking piano lessons in a group by a new method which is just being introduced. This new method is being taught under the supervision of Mrs. Ruth Foster. The pupils are first taught the notes of the keyboard on a silent non-resisting key board which was constructed at the school by the boy's manuel training classes and the instructors. This artificial keyboard is the full length of a real piano, and has the black and white keys. The pupils learn to play an easy lesson on this keyboard and then are sent to the piano to play the same.

The other teachers of the school who worked hard to make this project a great success were Miss Ruth Koehle and Miss Mildred Pearch. Probably a recital will be given later, it is reported.

The Leslie Salts won their first game of the Winter League, Sunday, from the Alameda Shops with a score of five to three.

The game was exceedingly interesting with Fred Muller, former Leslie Salt player and now second sacker for the Seattle club, playing short-stop.

Although the Alameda Shops secured the greatest number of hits the Leslies seemed to make theirs at the correct moments.

Robinson, for the Salts, and Allen and Arlett, for the shops, were the outstanding hitters.

They are now equipped to supply their whole territory with water because the new apparatus includes a water reservoir and a 200-gallon-per-minute pump. Heretofore the outlying sections of the town suffered due to a shortage of fire hydrants.

BETTER SHOWER ROOMS LIKELY AT AMADOR HIGH

Board of Trustees Will Take Up Two Matters of Importance

Plans for the erection of an addition to the boys' shower rooms and the grading and oiling of the school grounds were discussed and definately acted upon by board of trustees of Amador Valley High school, Pleasanton, at its meeting Friday. These items of business had been before the board at a previous meeting and reports from investigations were made, what lead the trustees to believe they were in a position to act definitly at that time.

It had been found that the shower accomodations are inadequate especially during the football season when visiting teams bring large squads. It is necessary for the boys to use the girls' shower rooms, and even then the quarters are cramped, it was said.

In connection with the grading and oiling of the grounds, it had been pointed out to the board that during the rainy season it is impossible to cross the quadrangle without getting wet feet, and that during the dry portion of the year the dust is as bad as the water.

Estimates have been asked on both of these items, and if it is found that the work can be done at a cost which is within the school's budget, it is anticipated that no delay will be exeprienced in having the improvements made.

Reckless Driver Given Fine Of Ten Dollars

Len Douglas, of Stockton, was fined $10 by Judge P. C. Quinn, of Pleasanton, Monday morning when he entered a plea of guilty to a charge of reckless driving. Douglas was arrested by Constable Albert Vervais in Sunol Sunday evening and lodged in the Pleasanton jail over night. Douglas paid his fine and was released.

School Newspaper Is Being Planned By Amador Students

Publication Will Be Issued Possibly Every Two Weeks

Plans for the publishing of a semi-monthly school paper were completed at Amador Valley High school last week by members of the Student Body, co-operating with a committee appointed by William Bottini, president of the student organization. The name for the paper has not as yet been selected.

In the past years the paper has been published by the different classes, but did not prove to be very satisfactory, according to the students. Last year the Sophom re class prepared the paper.

More interest is being shown in the school paper this year, it was said, and the instructors as well as the students feel that the enterprise will be a success. The students are now engaged in selecting nonimees for the positions of editor and business manager.

The committee which will complete the plans for the paper is composed of Freda Garidaldi, chairman; Olive Adams, and Frank Marino.

Reverse Charge Telephone Calls Take Lower Rates

Telephone Co. Announces New Type of Improved Inter-City Service

Telephone users are now allowed to "reverse the charges" on inter-city station-to-station calls without paying the "particular person" rate, the Pacific Telephone Company has announced.

The new arrangement will apply to all inter-city station-to-station calls for which the initial charge is 25c or more.

"Station-to-station" is the term used to describe long distance calls in which the calling person will talk with anyone who answers. instead of a particular person.

Heretofore "reversed charge" inter-city calls have been charged for at the "particular person" rate.

This new arrangement, which will result in a direct savings to telephone users of the coast, is declared to be but one step in a broad plan of development. The telephone company announced that it's program included further changes in inter-city rates for the benefit of its customers, to be placed in effect as rapidly as conditions will permit.

WATER DIRECTORS MOURN DEATH OF E. H. STEVENSON

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Alameda County Water District held last Saturday they passed a set of resolutions expressing their deep respect for the late Eugene Stevenson, of Centerville. At the same meeting they elected George Lowrie, of Centerville, to fill his place on the board. Their resolutions follow:

"Whereas our associate for many years, Eugene H. Stevenson, has been called by death, therefore

"Be it Resolved by the directors of Alameda County Water District that we profoundly regret the passing in the very prime of life of one whom by long and intimate association we had learned to esteem so highly, and

"Be it Resolved that in his death the people of Alameda County Water District have lost a loyal, faithful and efficient servant. His long career as a director of the district has been marked at all times by his zeal to serve the best interests of the people. His rugged honesty and devotion to their welfare have been of inestimable value and as the future unrolls itself his splendid services will be more and more appreciated, and

"Be it Resolved that this board extends to his bereaved family our sincerest and deepest sympathy in their hour of sad affliction.

"Be it Further Resolved that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this board, a copy sent to the family of the deceased, and a copy given to our local papers for publication."

Joint Operetta For Christmas Planned

Instead of giving operettas in each of the grammar schools of Washington township during the Christmas holidays, Mrs. Charlotte Huntley Foster, instructor in vocal music for the schools, is working out a plan for a township operetta in which each school will have a part. If the plan meets with the approval of all of the schools the program will be given in the new gymnasium of Washington Union High school which has a seating capacity of over 3000. Such a program, Mrs. Foster explained, would entail nearly as much work as the customary individual operettas, but would give the public a better opportunity to appreciate the work being accomplished throughout the township. Several of the schools have approved the plan.

New Talking Picture Rivals "Covered Wagon"

Several years ago "The Covered Wagon" became an overnight sensation in the film world. Now a new title is written into screen history. It is "The Big Trail," Fox Films' $2,000,000 epic of those hardy pioneers who followed the Oregon trail into a new land and there established a mighty empire. It opens tomorrow at the Fox T & D theatre, Oakland.

One critic said of this Raoul Walsh production, "Hewn out of the challenging mountains, the blistering deserts and the muddy swamps of the virgin west, "The Big Trail" will stand as a monument in sound celluloid to the men who helped build the West into an empire. It inspires patriotism."

THE DOUBLE CROSS

by

A. E. THOMAS

W.N.U. SERVICE

Copyright By Dodd, Mead and Company, Inc.

Two persons enter into a conspiracy against a third one. One of the conspirators is not true to the compact. Secretly he informs the third party or takes other action that defeats the conspiracy and throws the burden on his trusting partner Such is the origin of the term, double cross It has had various modifications and applications until it has come to mean almost any underhanded gaining of confidence and subsequent betrayal. Beginning as a slang term, it was too expressive to remain so, and is now a recognized figure of speech. A singularly wicked form of the double cross is the basis for this story A man proves recreant to the most sincere form of friendship, recreant to the partner who held him in the closest regard, aided him over rough places, paid his debts and persistently excused or overlooked his faults The most dastardly action was when the false friend came between the true one and the woman he loved

Written by a successful playwright, the story is essentially dramatic, crisp in dialogue and realistic in action. The metropolitan setting is used with fine effect to produce atmosphere and characterization. The absorbing elements of the plot are rendered more fascinating by a vein of subtlety and mystery leading to an unexpected climax near the end. The story might appropriately be termed the triple cross, for the double crosser himself becomes the victim of one whom he trustingly took into his enterprise.

CHAPTER I.—Jim Stanley, wealthy young New York business man, unable to concentrate in his dictation to his desk audiphone, has the machine taken to his home, intending to finish his work there Rollin Waterman his business partner and closest friend, comes in Both men are avowedly in love with Doris Colby Stanley proposes they toss a coin to determine which of them shall, that evening, first ask her to marry him Waterman wins

CHAPTER II.—Nina Morgan Waterman's secretary, also his mistress, has overheard his conversation with Stanley and resents Waterman's plans to desert her Waterman tells her he is practically penniless and must make a rich marriage. He urges Nina to go to Doris and tell her she (Nina) has been wronged—but by Stanley The girl consents, on Waterman's promise to take care of her.

CHAPTER III.—Doris admits to her father her interest in both Stanley and Waterman, and is sure they are both in love with her, but she is unable to make up her mind which to marry

CHAPTER IV.—Nina goes to Doris with her story, securing a promise that Doris will not reveal the source of her information She convinces Doris of Stanley's duplicity, and leaves her broken hearted, and realizing that it is Stanley she really has loved

CHAPTER V.—Waterman that evening asks Doris to marry him, and she, believing Stanley unworthy, accepts him. According to the arrangement, Stanley appears, to learn his rival has won. He accepts the situation, and as a wedding present gives his share of the business to Waterman. Next day he arranges with his secretary, Frank Wilson, to take charge of his other business interests. He is going to India.

CHAPTER VI.—Doris, unable to put Stanley completely out of her mind, tells Waterman part of Nina's story. He promises to "try" to find the girl, so that full corroboration can be made. Waterman is deeply in debt to a gambler, Bromfield, and the latter presses for payment. Waterman quiets him by the news of his engagement to the wealthy Doris Colby

CHAPTER VII.—Waterman makes a financial arrangement with Nina which will insure her silence.

CHAPTER VIII.—Frank Wilson, who has long been aware of Waterman's crooked business methods and his debts, sees Nina at the wedding, and vague suspicions are aroused in him. He leaves Waterman's employ. The latter begins to importune Doris for money, ostensibly for the "business" but actually for gambling purposes.

factful here than elsewhere."

"I quite understand, Mr. Colby. All sorts and conditions come to your office in the way of business. As a matter of fact, after receiving your kind invitation, nothing would have kept me away."

"You are curious to know why I wish to see you?"

"I admit it."

"Ah, well," smiled the lawyer, "I counted a little on that. Will you smoke?" he added, indicating a box of perfectos upon his desk.

"Thanks, no. The temptation to smoke in my line of business is so constant that it is a case of smoke all the time or not at all, and I have chosen the latter alternative."

"Yes—yes." Mr. Colby fell into a fit of abstraction. His silence lasted so long that Mr. Bromfield thought it wise to break it.

"What can I do for you?" he said.

"Oh yes—yes—to be sure," replied the lawyer, rousing himself, "I am upon the point of asking you to do me a favor."

Now, Bromfield had begun to have a suspicion as to the character of that favor, but he only said politely, "Anything in my power, I assure you."

Mr. Colby put out his hand, drew toward him a pad of paper, took up a pencil from the desk, and proceeded to draw a series of little pictures upon the pad. It was a way he had when conversing with clients. "I suppose," he went on, "you have heard of the theft of my daughter's necklace?"

"Naturally. Everybody has heard of it who can read the newspapers. Have you any clew?"

"None at all. The police have gone through all their customary motions. The private detectives employed by the insurance people have gone through theirs. And they have all drawn blank."

"I read in the papers," said Bromfield, "that the police were convinced from the first that it was an inside job."

"Yes, they always say that, when they fail in such a case. They feel that by such an announcement they can saddle at least a part of the blame upon the owner of the stolen gems."

"Still," said Bromfield, "you must admit that circumstances rather favor the inside theory. As I recall them, there was no evidence at all that the house had been entered. No locks were broken, no windows found suspiciously open, no evidence of the presence of a stranger in the apartment that night."

"True—true," agreed the lawyer. Another silence fell. Again it was Bromfield who broke it.

"I can see," he said, "that you have formed some theory of your own."

"Perhaps," admitted Mr. Colby He rose, walked to the window and looked out. When he turned again to Bromfield, he spoke easily, swiftly, like a man who has come to a decision.

"Mr. Bromfield," he said, "I do not need to beat about the bush with you. It is in connection with the theft of these jewels that I have asked you to come and see me this afternoon."

Bromfield affected surprise. "I shall be interested to see how that can possibly be," he said.

The lawyer continued: "I will not disguise from you the fact that I have a definite opinion as to the identity of the thief. I think I know his name. I shall not mention it either now or at any time. I do not desire to punish anyone, no matter whom it may be. Fortunately, since something more than one hundred thousand dollars is involved, the insurance prevents any pecuniary loss. But entirely aside from that feature of the case, the diamonds have a sentimental value for my daughter and myself."

"I know," said Bromfield. "They belonged to the late Mrs. Colby."

"Quite so, and to her mother before her. Naturally, therefore, there is a special reason for regretting their loss."

"I quite understand," agreed the sympathetic Bromfield.

"Now, we both understand," went on Mr. Colby, "that though you are in person an agreeable, cultivated and presentable individual, nevertheless your business is one which is discountenanced by the law."

"Quite true," interrupted Bromfield, defensively, "and yet I'll have you understand that I've never felt myself a criminal. All my games are on the level—they always have been. When gentlemen play at my place they have an equal chance with me, with the exception of the slight percentage in my favor which is inherent in the rules of certain games, and I never have been able to see why it should be made a criminal thing for me to allow men to risk their own money upon the chance of gaining mine."

"My dear Bromfield," smiled the lawyer, "we're not here to discuss the ethics of your business. What I was getting at is this, though as I say, you're a person whom it is agreeable to meet, and your personal morals are so far as I know above reproach, nevertheless I know that in your line of business it is sometimes necessary for you to come in contact with certain gentlemen who are not so scrupulous as yourself. Is that not true?"

"Unfortunately, yes."

"Very well, then, while I share your regret, nevertheless I wish if possible to make use of this lamentable circumstance."

"In what way, may I ask?"

"In this way," replied the lawyer, busy with his pencil upon a portrait whose features somehow took on a vague likeness to those of man of whom he was thinking at the moment. "It occurred to me that it was barely possible that in your regrettably necessary association with some of these, shall I say, declasse persons, you might by chance stumble upon some information which would enable me to recover my daughter's necklace." He stopped and glanced shrewly at the gambler.

The latter met his gaze. "It is possible," he said at length.

"In that case," went on the lawyer, "I wish to say that if you are able to recover them, I will see that you are reimbursed to the full amount of the insurance, plus any necessary expense. In addition to that, you will place me under a great obligation."

The gambler leaned forward in his chair, and fixed his keen eyes upon the other. "Understand me now, Mr. Colby—I have at present no knowledge whatever as to the whereabouts of the diamonds."

"My dear Bromfield," exclaimed the lawyer, reproachfully.

"Oh, I know—I know a good deal more than you perhaps think I do what is going on in your mind."

"I have endeavored to make myself very clear."

"You have done so. But just now I can promise nothing."

"I ask for no promise, except that you will do what you can for me."

"Very good," concluded Bromfield, rising. "I will do my best to serve you in this matter, Mr Colby. I will make inquiries in certain quarters. A good many people commonly regarded as undesirable citizens have reason to be grateful to me for various small services, and possibly some one of them may be able to help both you and me just now. I do not know but— You see, Mr. Colby, though you may not think it, we—criminals are often grateful for kindnesses received." And with this shot Bromfield departed.

He had spoken the exact truth when he said that he had no knowledge of the present whereabouts of the diamonds. Nevertheless, he had seen them not long after their theft. They had been offered him in payment of a gambling debt. He had flatly refused to accept them.

"No!" he said to his debtor. "How dare you bring them to me like this Take 'em away. I have never in all my life been concerned with any kind of theft, and never in my life do I wish to be. Put 'em in your pocket—take 'em away! I will never consent to be the receiver of stolen goods."

The debtor departed with the jewels and presently his debt was paid in cash. Bromfield knew, of course, how the money to settle the obligation must have been obtained, but that, he figured, was none of his business. His skirts were clear.

Some six hours after Bromfield left Mr. Colby in his office, a shabby little man rang his bell at the tradesmen's entrance of Bromfield's establishment. A few moments later he entered the office where Bromfield sat. The visitor was in no way abashed by the Presence.

"Mike," said Bromfield, "you or Charles know anything about these Colby diamonds?"

"I want 'em," said Bromfield.

"Yeah?"

"Yeah. Colby's a friend of mine. Can you get 'em?"

"Might."

"Get 'em, then."

"Might take a few days."

"Oh, sure. Got to chase around to get 'em together again I suppose."

"Yeah."

"Philly in on it?"

"Yeah."

"One-Eye?"

"Nope."

"Oh, well—nothin' to me who's in on it. Get 'em—that's all."

"One-Eye, he—er—er—kind of—er—er—"

Bromfield seized a pen, wrote six words on a piece of paper and flicked it across the desk. "Give him that," he said.

Mike picked up the paper, glanced at it, stuffed it in his shoe.

"This is Monday," went on Bromfield. How soon?"

"Wednesday night, mebbe."

"Right. Take a drink and beat it."

Mike did both of these things.

On Thursday morning next Mr. Colby, on going through the letters on his office desk already opened by his secretary, encountered the following:

"Mr. William Bromfield presents his compliments to Mr. Alexander Colby and requests the favor of a personal interview at Mr. Colby's office this afternoon between the hours of three and four. R. S. V. P."

The lawyer smiled a quizzical smile and took up the telephone.

Late that afternoon he spent one-half hour with Doris over the tea cups. This was a custom which had grown in frequency of late. Though he had always been close to his daughter, of late he had seemed to be drawn to her even more intimately than of old. He began to see that she needed him, and though he regretted the cause he was not ill-pleased with its result. The talk had fallen on the subject of the stolen jewels.

"It does seem, papa, as if the police were right," Doris was saying. "It seems as if it must have been somebody in this house."

"Oh, I don't know," said Mr. Colby. "The modern crook is a most resourceful animal."

"I should be glad to know," Doris answered, "that it was a burglar. I should almost be willing to give up all hope of seeing that necklace again in exchange for the assurance that the thief was no one whom I had known and trusted."

"I feel exactly as you do, my child, but I would not give up hope. I have a presentiment that somehow, in some way, that necklace will come back."

Mr. Colby departed from his daughter's drawing room that afternoon a little happier than he had been for some time. For weeks he had been convinced of her unhappiness. Not a word had ever been exchanged between them upon that subject, but he knew, and she knew that he knew. Until she spoke he would continue to be silent. But he believed that the thing must come to a separation.

He believed, too, that Waterman would fight if he could. He had wished for a weapon which he could use if it ever came to a fight. Now, at least, he had that weapon.

CHAPTER X

IT WAS in the month of October that Jim Stanley had departed for the East. It was in the following October that he returned. Wilson had known for five days that he was on his way. He had received from San Francisco a telegram which said: Arriving on the 24th. Engage hotel accommodations for two."

Wilson had done just that and no more—that is to say, he had held his tongue. And now, as he stood awaiting the arrival of the Limited, he wondered in whose company his employer was returning. The heart of the little clerk beat a trifle faster as he stood there waiting. Not only was he to meet his best friend after long separation—there was that, of course, but there was something more. He had a feeling that something exciting was about to happen. What it was he could not tell, but his sensations were those of a man who had covered his ears in anticipation of an explosion.

Stanley's quick eye caught Wilson's face the instant he emerged from the gate, followed by a company of porters loaded down with assorted luggage. He seized the clerk's hand in both his own.

"Well, well, Frank," he cried, with boyish enthusiasm. "God bless your soul! Here you are, eh? Here you are. I knew you'd be here. I'm d—n glad to see you, Frank!"

"Thank you, sir," was all Wilson could say. He had no way of expressing what he felt, but it was not necessary. Stanley knew quite well. Still holding Wilson's hand, he turned and glanced over his shoulder to a waiting figure which, even in this place of cosmopolitan apparitions, seemed most strange. The figure was that of a man, not old, yet certainly not young, not far from the height of Stanley himself, clad from neck to feet in oriental robes, girdled at the waist. Upon his head he wore a turban. If his features the eyes and nose alone were clearly visible, for the rest of his face was darkly bearded to his cheek bones. The stranger fixed his steady eyes upon the secretary.

"Frank," said Stanley, while the group of porters shifted uneasily under their burdens, "I want you to know my very good friend, Swami Ramanara—Swami, my secretary, Mr. Wilson."

"How do you do, Mr. Wilson," said the Swami in his slow, precise and careful English.

"Mr. Wilson has been in charge of my affairs during my absence in the East. You will probably see a good deal of him during your stay in New York, for he is sure to find many ways of making himself useful to you. He has a gift for that sort of thing." And again Stanley turned upon Wilson the smile that the little man loved.

"How Do You Do, Mr. Wilson," Said the Swami in His Slow, Precise and Careful English.

"I should be most happy," he said.

His arms folded upon his breast, the Swami inclined his head gravely.

"And now, Frank," said Stanley, "let's get along."

As the taxi whisked away from the terminal, Stanley peered eagerly through the window. Upon the southeast corner there stood a skyscraper. On the day that Stanley had left New York the place had been a hole in the ground. He said this to the Swami, who merely murmured, "Ah."

"I'm afraid," laughed Stanley to Wilson, "I'm afraid that we're going to have a hard time surprising the Swami. He has seen and known so many wonders in the spiritual world, that our material miracles may not interest him much."

"All these things," murmured the Swami, with a slight gesture that summed up all New York, "are of the moment. The spirit is eternal."

The three men dined together in Stanley's apartment in the hotel, Wilson allowing himself to be persuaded to remain.

After the meal, Stanley asked, "Well, what is the news?"

"Oh, nothing of any great importance," answered Wilson. He had news enough, but this was not the moment to tell it.

"Waterman well? And Mrs. Waterman?" continued Stanley.

"I believe so."

"I want to see them right away. Excuse me." He took up the telephone. "Plaza 2076, please—yes."

As he waited for the answer, Stanley continued. "They haven't either of them been very communicative. I got one letter from Waterman—waiting for me when I reached Yokohama—but none at all from Doris. Yes—Plaza 2076? Yes—may I speak with Mrs. Waterman? Just tell her it's Mr. Wilson." He smiled at the secretary, adding sotto voce, "I'll give her a little surprise."

In a moment he said: "Hello—yes—is that you—is that Doris? Yes, it's me! It's Jim, all right. Couldn't fool you, eh? I'm just in—I'm very well, and you? That's fine, when can I see you? How about this evening, after dinner?—Yes.— That'll be wonderful—yes. How is Rollin? Good. All right, after dinner then—Au revoir."

During this conversation Wilson's eyes never left Stanley's face. As Stanley's ear caught for the first time the sound of the well-known voice, there flashed across his face a look that was not lost upon the secretary—a look that told in a fraction of a second the secret of his heart. If Wilson had been in any doubt before, that doubt was ended. Swiftly his mind worked. Ought he to tell Stanley everything that he knew, and everything that he guessed about Wa-

MACMARR STORE WILL OPEN MEAT SHOP IN NILES

The MacMarr store in Niles is planning on opening a meat market in the very near future. According to the manager, he is most concerned over the problem of securing a local butcher to take charge of the market. If a local man cannot be secured a butcher will be sent out from Oakland, but every effort will be made to find a butcher here first.

The store will be remodeled to accomodate the butcher shop in the front section. Electric refrigeration will be installed to cool a large storage box for the big sides of beef and other meats. A showcase for displaying choice cuts will also be kept near the freezing point by the same refrigeration plant.

The whole equipment will be new, and will include, besides the refrigeration system, a grinder and a slicer powered by electricity.

Today's Scripture LESSON

By Rev. John R. Stevenson

Thou shalt rejoice in every good thing which the Lord thy God given unto thee.—Deut. XXVI-11.

Rejoice evermore. In everything give thanks.—Thess. V-16, 18.

Grave on thy heart each past "red letter day"!
Forget not all the sunshine of the way
By which the Lord hath led thee; answered prayers,
And joys unasked, strange blessings, lifted cares,
Grand promise echoes! Thus thy life shall be
One Record of His love and kindness to thee.
